Public bills in the hands of private members are expected to include: legislation for permissive use of special borrowing powers, it is expected that special contingencies. Pres. Elect Roosevelt Escaped Fusillade Of Bullets At Miami

Miami, Feb. 16.—Giuseppe Zanagaria's bulging eyes dilating as he talked with severe interrogators today, said he had no regrets for his attack on President-elect Roosevelt last night. "Why do you want to kill him? Did you want to kill the policeman who caught you?" asked Sheriff Harde.

"I no care to kill police," Zanagaria replied in broken English. "They work for leaving. As man I like Meester Roosevelt. As President I want keel him. I want keel all Presidents. In Italy ten years ago I want keel King, but I cannot get to heem."

There is a deep scar on Zanagaria's abdomen. He has been in the United States about nine years and is understood to be a naturalized citizen. Physicians said Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago has more than a fifty-fifty chance to recover. The condition of Mrs. Joseph Gill, shot in the abdomen, however, took a critical turn. Three others wounded are believed out of danger.

At the hospital where the Chicago mayor was taken with his head resting on Roosevelt's lap in the President-elect's car, Cermak said to Roosevelt: "I am mighty glad it was me instead of you. I wish you would be careful. The country needs you."

A deep expression of agony shown in the sun-tanned face of Roosevelt as he bent over and replied: "We need you and men like you."

Miami, Fla., Feb. 16.—Five persons were injured in a suggested attempt to assassinate President-elect Roosevelt. He escaped unhurt. The shots were fired by a man who later identified himself as the police station at Zanagaria of New York.

Assault Felled by Officer
A woman in the crowd who witnessed the shooting, said she pushed up Zanagaria's arm. Later a policeman hit him with a night stick and felled him. Zanagaria fired either five or six shots from a heavy caliber pistol. The woman's name was Mrs. W. F. Cross of Miami.

MONEY SAVING HARBORS

Sorel, on the St. Lawrence river, a short distance below Montreal, is an interesting example of how successful a relatively small and economical harbor can be in handling grain, even in competition with a big neighbor. Sorel does business at less cost than that at Montreal, because property and services of all kinds are cheaper; and it has taken only three years from the time it was built to there an export trade of close on fifteen million bushels of grain. This was handled by 62 vessels which found it worth while to stop at the newer port on the way from Montreal, because the loading and general service charges were lower.

The Montreal Gazette tells the interesting story in a recent issue, in these words:

"North American Elevators, Limited, erected in 1929 on property leased from the Dominion Government, an elevator having a storage capacity of two million bushels, and it is maintained, was enabled to handle grain more cheaply than the Montreal Harbor Commissioners on account of the relatively low rental being paid by the company for the wharf on which its warehouse stands."

"A total of 168 seagoing vessels cleared from the harbor last season, this figure comparing well with the previous year and with 40 ocean-going steamers in 1930. A proportion of these craft called at Sorel for bunker coal, but the heavy movement of grain through the private elevator was responsible for the material increase in the number of ships reloaded. Sixty-two ocean vessels were loaded with grain during the season. Forty-two loaded grain in 1931."

"Grain shipments, which totalled 14,822,246 bushels, showed an increase of 4,109,023 bushels over the previous year, when exports amounted to 10,713,223 bushels. In 1930, the first season in which the new elevator was operating, there were 3,441,118 bushels of grain handled outwards."

NEW CONCEPTION GIVEN OF HADES IS MORE MELLOW

Anglican Cleric Declares Fire and Brimstone Idea Obsolete—Remond Pantheism, Not Everlasting Torment, is Reward of Sin.

Montreal, Feb. 15 (CP)—To save the general public another sermon "on the dreary subject of Hell," Canon Allan P. Shattoff, rector of the Church of St. James the Apostle and well-known Anglican cleric, has made a "final statement on Hell" in the news columns of the Montreal Star.

Canon Shattoff bases his article on five points. No Catholic (universal) creed has given a place to the dogma of everlasting punishment. The ecclesiastical (world-wide) councils of the Church never promulgated a dogma on the subject of Hell. The Fathers of the Church were certainly never unanimous in their support of the dogma of everlasting damnation. The revisers of the New Testament in 1880 removed the words "Hell," "Everlasting," and "damnation" from the scriptural text. Lastly, the Church of England has no official doctrine of everlasting punishment.

These points are the basis for Canon Shattoff's contention that the doctrine of a "fire-and-brimstone" hell is obsolete; that no sin is great enough to warrant everlasting damnation. His contention has been challenged from the pulpit by Father Henry Smetana of the Society of Jesus and others, and the equal right of any Anglican, to refuse the dogma as binding upon his conscience. To Father Smetana's offence. To Father Smetana's offence. To Father Smetana's offence.

SUGGESTS MUSIC AS MENTAL BALM

New York (CP)—Edward Johnson, celebrated Canadian Metropolitan Opera House tenor, advocates music as a "stimulant to fortify the morale back of business and mental activities."

"All I am making my protest solely against Hell as a place of everlasting torment. I believe in punishment for sins, both here and hereafter, but punishment must be corrective and remedial, not vindictive and hopeless," Canon Shattoff said.

He referred to technocracy with "an exuberant flourish in an anti-depression discussion, Mr. Johnson said music and drama were used during the physical world with untold results, and they should be used now with equal power during the fear and mental World War. Music has a soothing way of paying dividends."

NEW BOXING CLASS MAY BE FORMED

New York, Feb. 16—Threatened with legislative extinction, boxing bused itself today brawling over a championship bout between Jack Sharkey and Primo Carnera, banned by the New York State Athletic Commission, for limiting Carnera's position, stood up on their resolve. A break from first was indicated, but denied by James A. Farley, chairman of the commission.

"It wouldn't be fair to those two gentlemen to say one way or the other regarding such a match," Farley said, "and I have no intention of suggesting what they should do."

I am resigning from the commission the first of the month. It will be their responsibility then, and I know they will dispose of it to the satisfaction of everyone."

He said it was his private opinion, however, that there was no reason for preventing Sharkey meeting Carnera just because the Italian outweighed the champion fifty or sixty pounds. Sharkey whipped Carnera decisively in fifteen rounds in 1931.

At the same time Jimmy Johnston, declared frankly he would continue preparations for the match until definitely ordered otherwise by the commission.

The bout probably will be staged in Boston in conjunction with the Boston Garden if the restriction is not lifted here.
